

ACADEMIC INTEGRITY

Background

Academic dishonesty includes plagiarism and cheating. Plagiarism is the unacknowledged use of other people's ideas or work. Cheating includes having someone else do an assignment for a student, acquiring answers to an assignment or test in an unauthorized manner and assisting another student to attain marks through misrepresentation.

Students are expected to exhibit academic integrity when completing assignments, tests and exams. Using work done by others as part of an assignment is acceptable only if a student clearly indicates whose work it is and where they obtained it (for example, from a website, book, article and so on).

The following are examples of behaviours that constitute plagiarism and cheating:

- Copying and pasting text from online media or websites.
- Transcribing text or simply modifying text from any printed material.
- Using a photograph, video or audio without permission and acknowledgement.
- Using another student's work, even with a few wording changes, and claiming it as one's own, even with permission from the other student.
- Acquiring work from third-party sources, including but not limited to emerging technologies such as artificial intelligence platforms.
- Translating from one language to another and submitting the result as one's original work.
- Using work that was completed for another class or purpose without getting permission from both teachers.
- Allowing another student to copy one's work.
- Taking credit for a group assignment where one has made no contribution.
- Looking at another student's test to view answers and/or talking to another student during a test; and
- Using a cellphone or technology device during a test, in an unauthorized and inappropriate manner.
